

Mondrian Compositions

It's hip to be square!
Piet Mondrian began creating the grid-based paintings he later became renowned for after World War 1. They were made up of thick black lines to create a grid of squares and rectangles, mainly coloured white, red, yellow and blue. Why not create your own using felt tips, colouring pencils, paint or even on your computer?

Piet Mondrian is known for being a pioneer of abstract art in the 20th Century.

Here's some examples for inspiration...
